The Life of Cardinal Gibbons

By ALLEN SINCLAIR WILL, M. A., Litt. D., LL. D.

A "Life" which for the first time reveals the Cardinal's great influence in matters of national importance and his eminence as a great American.

The range of his public services will be a revelation to most readers. These pages tell of how he became the youngest Bishop in the world, winning the special favor of Leo XIII, who made him a Cardinal. His constant stand for Americanism in obtaining the sanction of the Church for organized labor, in combating religious intolerance, and in working for civic reforms, makes him an outstanding figure in the history of his time, even aside from his position as the leader of a church of tremendous vitality. His Life should stand beside that of your favorite great American, whoever he may be. In two volumes, with portraits, etc., $10.00

My Years on the Stage

By JOHN DREW

With a Prefatory Appreciation by BOOTH TARKINGTON

A vivid picture of the brilliant career of the most distinguished actor on the American stage. In an easy, casual way which is delightfully convincing of his sincerity and affection for his friends, he tells of the plays in which he has appeared, of the parts he has created, of the people who through fifty years have acted with him. And it is not merely of theatres, plays and actors that he writes; but also of men and women distinguished in the world of fashion, of politics, of diplomacy, of finance and of the professions who were his friends.

As Booth Tarkington puts it: "His memories may be properly greeted, in fact, as we should greet a birthday speech at the banquet we are too numerous to make for him—that is, with cheers as he rises to address us."

Fully illustrated. Cloth, $5.00
